

A Jewish Journey to Europe

October 15 - 26, 2017

Led by Rabbi Marc Rudolph

Itinerary Proposal

(As of April 28 - Subject to Change)

Central Europe was the cradle and center of Ashkenazi Jewish civilization until the 13th and 14th centuries. In the wake of the Crusades, the Black Plague and unrelenting Christian persecution, expulsions and massacres, the center of European Jewish life and creativity shifted eastward to Poland. In the 19th and early 20th centuries, as Jews grappled with the new challenges presented by emancipation and freedom, the German speaking Jewish communities evolved new models of Jewish living, laying the groundwork for the development of the Reform, Conservative and Modern Orthodox movements. The Nazis and their allies destroyed the Jewish communities of Germany, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, but their legacies are still alive and relevant in contemporary Jewish life. We will explore and trace the story of Ashkenazi Jewry past and present, using the major centers of Berlin, Prague and Budapest to remember and learn about the past and ultimately to better understand the complex nature of our own contemporary Jewish identity, belief and practice.
